Jasmine has worked with Australia's top companies, coordinating and designing many research and training projects. These are just some of the businesses she has helped - Sydney Airport, Macquarie Group, ANZ, AMP, Lend Lease, Freehills, Canon, Pacifica, Toyota and South Corp.

As a strategic thinker, she is skilled in pinpointing organisational problems at an early stage, developing practical solutions and making recommendations that yield impressive results. She has helped companies to develop high performance teams, drawing on talent management strategies to maximise employee potential.

Jasmine has coordinated and directed large and complex organisational change projects. These include mergers and acquisitions, international company improvement projects, corporate identity, international communication audits, company-wide strategic business planning, joint venture management and globalising human resources.

She has extensive experience in building cross-cultural teams, resolving workplace and intercultural conflicts as well as nurturing leadership competencies in diverse cultures.

Executive coaching and counselling programs she has designed aim to maintain high performance while resolving challenging issues. These programs also address relationship strategies both professionally and personally. Over thirty years, she has tackled many complex work and family issues.

A dynamic speaker with a good sense of humour, Jasmine is often called upon to be a keynote presenter at management and executive conferences. She has been asked by universities to guest lecture in international management. She is regularly quoted in the media.
